1. Message from our CEO

It is my honour to introduce MyMind’s 12th Annual Report for 2018.

Since its inception, MyMind has sought to support every person in Ireland who is struggling with their mental health.

During 2018, we took a huge leap forward in this mission with the launch of our Members network, allowing us to offer timely and affordable help to those living beyond the reach of our five centres.

We will continue to grow this network and MyMind’s nationwide presence in 2019. By working with the best counsellors, psychotherapists and psychologists across Ireland, we will continue to push past the barriers that can stand in the way of positive mental health for all.

2018 was also a time of growth in the cities we serve in Ireland, opening our third centre in the Capital in the iconic surrounds of Christchurch, Dublin 8 last September, and relocating to a bigger centre in Cork city in March.

As the largest blended mental health service provider in Ireland, we have always been proud of the steps we have taken to create new wellbeing solutions in Ireland and beyond.

We began 2018 by pioneering a new integrated appointment system to make accessing support even easier for our client.

Although not without its challenges, this has been one of MyMind’s most significant and successful projects, and a reflection of our determination to embrace new technologies to connect more clients to lasting and life changing mental health solutions.

During the year, I shared my knowledge of e-mental health on a global platform at the International Initiative for Mental Health Leadership conference in Sweden, as well as seminars and conferences throughout Ireland.

In 2018, MyMind was named as a recipient of the Social Enterprise Development Fund through Social Innovation Fund Ireland which made the opening of our Dublin 8 centre a reality.

It was a privilege to receive such an accolade, especially given the calibre of our fellow recipients. We want to give a special thanks to Social Innovation Fund for recognising what we have achieved and the potential of our impact.

Looking ahead to 2019 and to the dawn of our teenage years, we are confident that the road ahead will be paved with further progress, achievement and growth.

A major project in 2019 will be the opening of our fourth Dublin centre in Tallaght and we will also be driving forward with the expansion of our Members network to every county in Ireland.

I want to take this opportunity to thank all of our supporters, our partner organisations, our team and very importantly, our clients who are the heart of every step forward we take towards creating healthier lives and communities.

Kindest regards,
Krystian Fikert
2. Message from our Chairperson

I am delighted to introduce the MyMind annual report for 2018.

The dedication of our mental health professionals, our executive management team, our funders and, most importantly, those who seek support and growth at MyMind, has been at the heart of a fulfilling and rewarding 2018.

MyMind expanded its presence to nine new counties in Ireland in 2018. The team undertook an analysis of regional mental health services and identified areas that were under-supported by nearest urban centres. New partnerships were created with mental health professionals in counties Roscommon, Sligo, Donegal, Louth, Meath, Carlow, Kilkenny, Tipperary and Kerry. We aim to grow MyMind presence to over twenty counties by the end of 2019.

MyMind opened a major new centre in the Liberties, Dublin 8, in September 2018. It is the fifth location in Ireland, with others in Cork, Limerick and Dublin 1 and Dublin 6. It follows a full renovation of 2A Christchurch Hall, High Street, in this historic part of Dublin.

Senator Lynne Ruane kindly opened the centre and said, ‘to hear of a mental health service that has no waiting list, with an appointment available in a couple of days, is just unheard of. Along with the availability of support in so many different languages, MyMind is a service that is badly needed in Ireland.’ Eighteen mental health professionals offer services to clients at this new location and appointment growth has been strong in the first few months.

These new expansion activities have contributed to the twelfth consecutive year of growth for MyMind since opening. Over one hundred mental health professionals now offer services in fifteen languages in Ireland and, through our online services, internationally.

I am struck by their passion and belief in MyMind’s social mission of equal access to mental health care for all people.

Our professionals have access to training, clinical and quality review guidance, office support and peer support networks. We continue to search for new ways to expand our impact as well as invest in and support the team who provide our services.

We look forward to 2019 and wish you every health in the year ahead.

Kindest regards,

John Travers

In its first three months, our Dublin 8 centre supported close to 600 clients for a wide range of mental health issues such as depression, anxiety, bereavement, self-esteem, trauma, sexual identity, and more.

MyMind founder and CEO Krystian Fikert says, ‘We are very proud to be opening our third centre in Dublin since 2006. We are proud to now be part of the fabric of Dublin 8. It is also a part of Dublin that’s rich in diversity- from the college student to the young professional, local businesses, and communities. It is also a part of Dublin, like the whole of Ireland, that has the need and the right to affordable and easy to access mental health support,’ he said. Author and Senator Lynn Ruane spoke at the centre opening in September and praised the service for its accessibility.

Senator Ruane said, ‘To hear of a mental health service that has no waiting list, with an appointment available in a couple of days, is just unheard of. Along with the availability of support in so many different languages, MyMind is a service that is badly needed in Ireland.’

Our supports

MyMind was a perfect fit for our Social Enterprise Development (SED) Fund and we were delighted to work with them throughout 2018. The impact they are having on a critical social issue, their strong business model and continuing endeavours to scale up their operations are the exact qualities that we are looking for in the social enterprises that we support. It is also evident that innovation is at the heart of everything that MyMind do. This, of course, is very important to us at the Social Innovation Fund Ireland.

We were absolutely delighted to see MyMind go on and win the Best Social Enterprise of the Year at the 2019 All Ireland Community & Council Award presented by IPB Insurance and LAMA and we wish them all the best as they continue to make mental health services affordable and accessible to everyone in Ireland.

John Evoy, Social Enterprise Development Manager, Social Innovation Fund Ireland

Our partners

Dublin Business School has a strong focus on student health and well-being, with the mental health of our students being a priority. We partnered with MyMind in 2018 to offer a free counselling service for all students. A key deliverable for us is that students in difficulty have access promptly and in a manner that is suitable to them. The partnership with MyMind ensures confidentiality and a guaranteed appointment within 72 hours. Our students have also praised the innovative, non-traditional approach and alternative delivery through on-line and video link.

8.4. Letters from our team

Lorraine Hackett, Clinical Team Member
I have been working with MyMind since 2011, initially during my academic training and now as a fully accredited humanistic and integrative psychotherapist. Having recently also joined the clinical specialist team, I am now coming to understand the organisation from many different perspectives. My Mind, as a social enterprise, has the capacity to be a key part of real change in the landscape of mental health services in Ireland. The commitment of the organisation to accessible therapy for everyone means that engagement with talk therapy can become a viable option for a cohort of the population that previously found it inaccessible.

It means that talk therapy is not an elite and indulgent tool, reserved only for those that can afford it but something that anyone can access, with the impetus now being on whether or not therapy is a tool that you wish to utilise rather than one that you may not be able to afford. From a therapist’s point of view, working at My Mind gives me access to a peer group with a great diversity of skills and specialities. The recent introduction of both the clinical specialist role and of the peer support groups mean that therapists have more access to each other than ever before within the organisation and this sharing of expertise and resources represents a significant and exciting change in the potential for personal development and professional advancement.

As a clinical specialist, I am able to develop my understanding of the manner in which the organisation works and am excited to be part of a dynamic movement as the organisation expands and grows. Being on a team that is committed to serving the needs of clients whilst creating a positive and engaged work environment for therapists is a wonderful opportunity to see how a social enterprise can move into a public space and cause a real change in how mental health services are offered and delivered in Ireland.

Alisha Donovan, MyMind Member
Recently moving to a new country and beginning my private practice journey, I recognized that networking would be a vital component to continue supporting people of different backgrounds, experiences and perspectives. Upon discovering MyMind, I instantly became excited to work with their not-for-profit social enterprise that focuses on supporting mental health professionals and making a difference in lives of people by providing convenient and affordable mental health services in rural, under-resourced areas in Ireland.

I felt immediately embraced by MyMind team. I am so grateful to be part of a company that focuses on supporting professionals from all different backgrounds and strongly encourages a peer-support model where each clinician share their expertise, resources and professional perspectives in order to continue to develop individually and as a team member.

The simplicity of the platform provides ease and accessibility for all who enter into the therapeutic process. It is rare and refreshing to find an organisation that is progressive and focused on the wellbeing of the clients served, as well as, being invested in their employees. MyMind is catering to the changing needs of mental health services and I am honoured to be on this journey with them.
